Housing over the life course: housing histories, careers

This chapter reviews the published work that explains the changing relationship between households and the dwellings in which they live over their life course. It starts with a section on the role of risk within contemporary society. This is followed by an examination of the debates around housing careers, housing histories, housing biographies

Recent Advances in Research on Housing Transitions and the ...

Economists focused on the operation of housing markets, sociologists on issues of access to housing and geographers on transitions through the housing stock as households progressed through the life course. While there are still strong disciplinary perspectives in housing research the last two decades have been a time of greater intersection and collaboration amongst social scientists
